

SKELETONS: SPECIES VARIANTS

SKELETONS: SPECIES VARIANTS IS A MONSTER SUPPLEMENT FOR 5E THAT PRESENTS SKELETONS AS STRUCTURAL UNDEAD rather than disposable minions. Instead of treating skeletons as a single interchangeable stat block, this book expands the concept across multiple peoples and monstrous bodies—each preserving exactly one biomechanical racial trait while remaining mindless, cultureless animated bone.

The intent of this product is mechanical clarity and tactical pressure without numerical escalation.

Humanoid variants operate at low CR and are designed to function in groups, forcing weapon adaptation through their Structural Undead doctrine: immunity to piercing damage, resistance to slashing damage, vulnerability to bludgeoning damage, and immunity to poison and necrotic damage. Larger skeletal bodies scale naturally according to their physical frame, not through spellcasting or retained intelligence.

Each skeleton fills a battlefield niche defined purely by anatomy—dense dwarven anchors, swift elven frames, compact halfling interiors, long-limbed bugbear reach controllers, aquatic merfolk hunters, charging minotaur shock units, and colossal giant war engines. These creatures do not command. They do not strategize. They simply move, strike, and rattle forward as animated structure.

Cultural memory, motive, and personality are intentionally absent. Whether raised by battlefield necromancy, ancient curses, lingering magic in forgotten tombs, or divine punishment is left to the GM. Use these stat blocks as tools. Why the bones rise is yours to decide.

Undead Nature. Undead do not require air, food, drink, or sleep.

Structural Undead. This skeleton represents compact animated bone reinforced by necromantic force rather than living tissue.

Small Frame. Attack rolls against this skeleton have disadvantage if the attacker is Large or larger.

Jaw Rattle. The hollow, rhythmic clicking of animated bone—teeth chattering in empty skulls, joints grinding in unnatural cadence—creates a deeply unnerving sound. When a creature starts its turn within 10 ft. of this skeleton and can hear it, that creature must succeed on a DC 10 Wisdom saving throw or have disadvantage on the next attack roll it makes before the start of its next turn.
