

CARAVAN NOMADS

WE PRESENT THREE NEW CARAVAN CULTURES. ROAD Caravan Nomads, Sea Caravan Nomads, and Fey Caravan Nomads.

Caravan Nomads is a monster supplement for 5e that presents wandering societies not as background travelers, but as fully functioning mobile communities shaped by movement, opportunity, and survival beyond fixed borders. Instead of relying on a single nomadic NPC stat block, this book provides three distinct and escalating NPC ladders: land-bound road caravans, sea-roaming flotilla caravans, and strange fey-touched caravans that wander between the mortal world and the Feywild.

These are not separate ancestries. They are separate ways of living.

The intent of this product is mobility and cultural divergence. Road caravans represent adaptability, trade, and life lived along the arteries of civilization. Sea caravans represent wandering flotillas that move from port to port, living entirely upon the water. Fey caravans represent mysterious wanderers touched by the Feywild, blending illusion, performance, and misdirection into a surreal traveling society. Each ladder escalates not simply in strength, but in influence, authority, and control within the caravan.

Routes, alliances, and motives are intentionally undefined. These NPCs may represent colorful entertainers welcomed in every town, suspicious outsiders who appear and vanish overnight, or secretive networks of traders, thieves, and information brokers moving between distant cities. They are not meant to replace ordinary travelers—they represent organized caravan cultures built around movement as a permanent way of life.

Whether these caravans trade honestly, deceive outsiders, gather intelligence, or simply seek the next road, port, or hidden path is left entirely in the GM's hands.

ROAD CARAVAN NOMADS

"THE ROAD FEEDS THOSE WHO KEEP MOVING."

Road caravans travel dusty highways, mountain passes, and trade routes between cities. Their wagons carry tents, tools, animals, and everything needed to transform an empty clearing into a bustling camp within hours.

These nomads survive through cooperation and distraction. Performers gather crowds. Traders exchange goods. Meanwhile watchful guards protect the caravan and clever cutpurses exploit moments of opportunity. Movement is safety, and adaptability is survival.

Road caravans are designed for:

- Traveling festivals and roadside camps
- Trade route encounters
- Wandering performers and merchants
- Opportunistic theft and information gathering

They do not settle. The road is their home.

SEA CARAVAN NOMADS

"THE TIDE IS THE ONLY ROAD WE NEED."

Sea caravans live upon wandering flotillas of small ships and barges that move from harbor to harbor. Their vessels carry tents, performers, traders, and entire families who rarely step onto land for long.

These nomads thrive in ports and coastal settlements where crowds gather along docks and markets. Music, fire dancing, and performance draw attention while caravan members conduct trade or quietly acquire valuables from distracted onlookers.

Sea caravans are designed for:

- Portside encounters and harbor festivals
- Shipboard skirmishes and boarding fights
- Coastal trade networks
- Wandering flotilla societies

They do not follow roads. They follow currents.

FEY CARAVAN NOMADS

“THE PATH CHANGES WHEN THE MUSIC BEGINS.”

Fey caravans wander strange paths between the mortal world and the Feywild. Their camps appear where laughter, music, and strange lights draw curious travelers. Illusion, charm, and misdirection are woven into every performance.

These nomads are unpredictable. Some are playful tricksters. Others are manipulative social predators who exploit curiosity and vanity. Their camps shift locations mysteriously, sometimes vanishing entirely before dawn.

Fey caravans are designed for:

- Feywild crossroads encounters
- Illusion-heavy social scenes
- Strange traveling festivals
- Manipulation and misdirection encounters

They do not follow maps. They follow whim.
