

GOATFOLK

GOATFOLK IS A MONSTER SUPPLEMENT FOR 5E that introduces a race of bipedal mountain humanoids built for vertical terrain, narrow ledges, and deadly elevation. Instead of treating mountains as simple difficult terrain, this roster presents creatures who dominate height, footing, and positioning as their primary form of combat.

The intent of this product is encounter design through terrain interaction. Each goatfolk shares a common identity—sure-footed, fast-climbing, and nearly impossible to displace—while scaling in strength, coordination, and battlefield control as their rank increases. From young climbers to ancient elders, every rung reinforces the same core principle: the mountain is their weapon.

These creatures do not rely on complex tactics or magic. Their strength lies in physical mastery of terrain. They ram, kick, and drive enemies backward, turning every ledge into a threat and every drop into a potential kill. Where other creatures struggle to stand, goatfolk fight with total confidence.

Goatfolk are defined by stubbornness. Once they claim ground, they do not yield it. This trait manifests not only culturally but mechanically, through resistance to forced movement, fear, and loss of footing. Attempts to push, trip, or reposition them often fail, while they themselves excel at doing exactly that to others.

Goatfolk appear wherever mountains dominate the landscape:

- Narrow cliffside paths where a single misstep means death.
- High crag settlements carved into sheer rock faces.

- Sacred peaks and wind-scoured ridgelines.
- Mountain passes where they control movement through the heights.

Most goatfolk fight defensively, holding terrain rather than pursuing enemies. Faster variants reposition constantly across vertical surfaces, while stronger individuals anchor chokepoints and punish movement. Leaders coordinate these efforts, turning chaotic terrain into controlled battlefields.

Encounters with goatfolk should emphasize verticality and danger:

- Combat takes place on ledges, slopes, and uneven ground.
- Movement is risky, and falling is a constant threat.
- Enemies are pushed, repositioned, and forced into bad footing.
- The environment itself becomes a primary source of danger.

While a single goatfolk can be dangerous in the right terrain, groups become significantly more threatening. Together, they control space, deny movement, and systematically force intruders into lethal positions.

Use these monsters to transform mountains from background scenery into active, hostile environments. Populate high passes with territorial defenders, create cliffside ambushes, or build entire encounters around elevation and movement.

In the high places of the world, goatfolk do not chase their enemies. They stand firm, hold the ledges, and let the mountain do the killing.

GOATFOLK ROSTER

Challenge		Description
Name	Rating
Goatfolk Kid	0	Sure-footed young climber comfortable on steep slopes and narrow mountain ledges.
Goatfolk Herdfolk	1/4	Mountain commoner with strong balance, stubborn resolve, and powerful kicks.
Goatfolk Cragprinter	1/2	Agile cliff-runner who uses speed, elevation, and ramming attacks to control positioning.
Goatfolk Perchguard	1	Defensive warrior who anchors narrow terrain and punishes movement with horns and hooves.
Goatfolk Horncaller	3	Battlefield leader who coordinates allies and dominates vertical terrain through movement.
Goatfolk High Crag Elder	5	Nearly immovable master of the peaks whose strength and balance make it a living embodiment of the mountain.

Challenge 1/2 (100 XP)

Sure-Footed. This goatfolk has advantage on ability checks and saving throws made to resist being knocked prone or moved against its will.

Mountain Climber. This goatfolk can climb difficult surfaces, including steep cliffs and narrow ledges, without needing to make an ability check.

Perch Skirmisher. While this goatfolk is on higher ground than its target, it has advantage on attack rolls.

ACTIONS

Ram. Melee Weapon Attack: +5 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 8 (1d8 + 3) bludgeoning damage, and the target must succeed on a DC 12 Strength saving throw or be pushed 5 feet.

Kick. Melee Weapon Attack: +5 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 8 (1d8 + 3) bludgeoning damage.

- Crag sprinters define goatfolk combat—fast, vertical, and positional.
- Use them to pressure players near edges, forcing saving throws or repositioning.
- They should constantly reposition, climbing and dropping into advantageous angles.

GOATFOLK HIGH CRAG ELDER

Medium humanoid (goatfolk), neutral

Armor Class 17 (natural armor)

Hit Points 136 (16d8 + 64)

Challenge 5 (1,800 XP)

Sure-Footed. This goatfolk has advantage on ability checks and saving throws made to resist being knocked prone or moved against its will.

Mountain Climber. This goatfolk can climb difficult surfaces, including steep cliffs and narrow ledges, without needing to make an ability check.

Immovable on the Peak. While this goatfolk is in contact with stone or natural terrain, it cannot be pushed, pulled, or knocked prone, and it has advantage on Strength saving throws.

Stubborn Will. This goatfolk has advantage on saving throws against being charmed or frightened.

ACTIONS

Multiattack. This goatfolk makes two attacks: one with its ram and one with its kick.

Ram. Melee Weapon Attack: +8 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 14 (2d8 + 5) bludgeoning damage, and the target must succeed on a DC 15 Strength saving throw or be pushed 10 feet and knocked prone.

Kick. Melee Weapon Attack: +8 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 14 (2d8 + 5) bludgeoning damage.

REACTIONS

Unyielding Counter. When a creature within 5 feet misses this goatfolk with a melee attack, this goatfolk can make a kick attack against that creature.

- The elder represents total mastery of terrain—treat it as nearly immovable in mountain environments.
- Use narrow ledges, cliffs, and elevation to maximize its strengths.
- The fight should feel like the players are struggling against both the creature and the mountain itself.
