

THE TERRACOTTA ARMY

THE TERRACOTTA ARMY REPRESENTS THE ETERNAL GUARDIANS OF AN IMPERIAL TOMB COMPLEX. SCULPTED TO RESEMBLE disciplined soldiers of the Qin dynasty, these constructs awaken only when sacred burial chambers are disturbed. When they rise, they fight as an organized army rather than scattered statues.

Terracotta encounters emphasize formation discipline and command hierarchy. Individual warriors are not especially powerful, but their strength lies in numbers and coordination. Spearmen hold corridors, archers support from behind, and commanders strengthen nearby constructs with battlefield authority. A Terracotta force feels like an ancient army reawakening rather than a group of independent monsters.

TERRACOTTA ARMY ROSTER

Short Sword. Melee Weapon Attack: +4 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 5 (1d6 + 2) piercing damage.

- This construct is designed to fire from prepared defensive positions behind other terracotta soldiers.
- It remains motionless until intruders enter the guarded chamber or burial hall.
- It prefers to maintain distance while coordinating with other archers to maximize volley damage.

THE BRONZE HOPLITES

THE BRONZE HOPLITES REPRESENT ANIMATED STATUES INSPIRED BY THE DISCIPLINED WARRIORS OF ANCIENT GREECE. Forged in bronze and shaped in the likeness of temple guardians and heroic soldiers, these constructs stand watch over sacred sites, city gates, and divine sanctuaries. When awakened, they move with the deliberate precision of a trained phalanx.

Bronze Hoplite encounters emphasize formation warfare. Individual warriors are dangerous, but their true strength emerges when they stand shoulder to shoulder. Spears extend from behind shield walls while commanders reinforce the formation through disciplined coordination. A Bronze Hoplite force does not rush recklessly into combat. It advances slowly, locks shields, and forces enemies to break themselves against the formation.

These constructs are often bound to temples, sacred battlefields, or mythic shrines. Some may have been created by divine smiths, others by priests seeking eternal guardians. Regardless of origin, once awakened they fight with relentless discipline and unwavering purpose.

BRONZE HOPLITE ROSTER

Name	Challenge Rating	Description
Bronze Hoplite Squire	1/2	Lesser bronze warrior construct forming the outer ranks of phalanx formations guarding sacred sites.
Bronze Hoplite	2	Standard animated hoplite statue armed with spear and shield, fighting in disciplined formations.
Bronze Phalanx Guard	4	Heavy bronze infantry construct specializing in shield-wall defense and formation control.
Bronze Hoplite Captain	6	Veteran bronze commander who strengthens nearby hoplites and directs phalanx tactics.
Bronze Hoplite Champion	8	Elite temple guardian representing the pinnacle of bronze hoplite constructs.
Talos, Bronze Titan	12	Legendary bronze construct forged to guard sacred shores, hurling boulders and burning intruders with molten bronze.

Challenge 2 (450 XP)

Construct Nature. This construct does not require air, food, drink, or sleep.

Bronze Body. The bronze phalanx guard has resistance to nonmagical piercing and slashing damage.

Phalanx Formation. While the bronze hoplite is within 5 feet of another bronze hoplite construct, it gains a +2 bonus to AC.

ACTIONS

Multiattack. The bronze hoplite makes two spear attacks.

Spear. Melee Weapon Attack: +5 to hit, reach 10 ft., one target. Hit: 7 (1d8 + 3) piercing damage.

Shield Bash. Melee Weapon Attack: +5 to hit, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 6 (1d6 + 3) bludgeoning damage.

- This construct forms the backbone of bronze phalanx formations defending temples and sacred cities.
- It attempts to remain shoulder-to-shoulder with other hoplites to maximize the phalanx defense.
- It advances methodically and holds ground rather than chasing fleeing enemies.

BRONZE HOPLITE CAPTAIN

Challenge 6 (2,300 XP)

Construct Nature. This construct does not require air, food, drink, or sleep.

Bronze Body. The bronze hoplite captain has resistance to nonmagical piercing and slashing damage.

Phalanx Command. Bronze hoplite constructs within 30 feet of the captain gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls.

Shield Wall. While the captain is within 5 feet of another bronze hoplite construct, both creatures gain a +2 bonus to AC.

ACTIONS

Multiattack. The bronze hoplite captain makes two spear attacks.

Spear. Melee Weapon Attack: +7 to hit, reach 10 ft., one target. Hit: 15 (2d10+4) piercing damage.

BONUS ACTIONS

Command Strike (Recharge 5–6). The captain commands one bronze hoplite construct it can see within 30 feet. That construct immediately makes one weapon attack using its reaction.

- This construct commands bronze hoplite formations defending temples or sacred cities.
- It positions itself near the center of a phalanx to maximize its command aura.
- It focuses on directing the formation rather than advancing ahead of the line.
