

TINKERER'S DEVICES

TINKERER'S DEVICES IS A 5TH EDITION compatible supplement containing 18 mechanical constructs for use in your campaign. From flame-throwing tripods and deployable barricades to mechanical cranes and scissor lifts, each Device is a large operator-dependent object with a physical presence on the battlefield. This supplement requires the free Tinkerer's Compendium for all construction, repair, salvage, and parts rules.

DEVICES

Devices are the heavy artillery of the tinkerer's arsenal. They are deployed in a location and operated by any creature within reach — they do not act on their own. Each action listed in a Device's stat block requires a creature to spend their action to perform it.

Devices have Armor Class and Hit Points and can be targeted by attacks. When a Device is reduced to 0 Hit Points a random part fails and must be replaced before it can be used again. Some Devices have special traits that trigger at 0 Hit Points.

Devices occupy space on the battlefield using the following token sizes:

- Small — 5x5 ft.
- Medium — 5x5 ft.
- Large — 10x10 ft.
- Huge — 15x15 ft.
- Gargantuan — 20x20 ft.

TRANSPORTING DEVICES

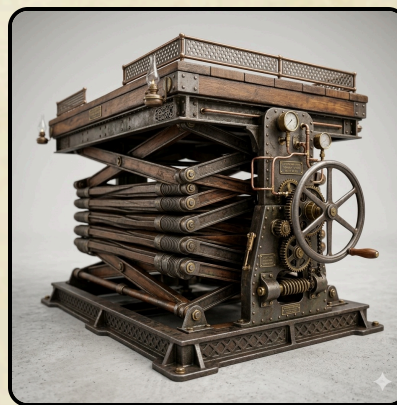

Devices are heavy objects not designed for rapid deployment. Transporting a Device requires sufficient combined Strength to move it — the DM determines whether terrain or obstacles make transport impractical. Devices are assumed to be deployed before combat. Deploying during combat costs an action and the Device cannot be used until the following round.

TARGETING DEVICES

Devices benefit from cover in the same way creatures do. A Device behind a wall cannot be targeted from the other side. When a Device reaches 0 Hit Points a random part fails as described in the Tinkerer's Compendium.

MULTIPLE OPERATORS

A Device can only be operated by one creature at a time. However different creatures can perform different actions on the same Device in the same round — one creature may Reposition while another Reloads, for example.
